The Santa Fe Pacific agent at Grants is developing a vein of copper in the Yuni mountains, south of Grants. The vein has all the appearance of a true fluore; it runs 40 per cent and so far is six inches in width. A number of claims have been located in the vicinity since January 1.

A Resolution.

Old Albuquerque, Feb. 21.—In reference to an article appearing on the editorial page of your paper of the 19th inst., charging us with trying to "create a break in the republican party, because we could not control the republican party primaries in precinct 15, and accusing us as life-long democrats," we deny the assertions made as trying to create any disturbance or break in the republican ranks, as we took no part in the primaries during the proceedings of the organization. When we said a few words, it was after the adjournment, pleading with the sheriff to allow the people to hold their meeting in the court room, where they had been called for that purpose. Every man that was present at that meeting well knows that the only man that made any motions at the meeting was Hon. Jesus Romero, and we suppose that his republican bias beyond reproach. As to our democratic prin-cles, that is for us to determine, and while you will know that both republican factions have, at different general elections, mingled and combined with the democrats, it would not rule our desires out to join one or the other of the republican factions. You, Mr. Kiltor, ought to understand that the whole republican party has not been together in this county for years, and at the present condition of political matters the situation stands with the republican party well split in two, and it would be democratic (as you call us) we would even have a right to join one side or the other. Respectfully,

ANTONIO BACA,
MARIANO ARMILLO Y OTERO.

RAILROAD IMPROVEMENTS.

Expressive Improvements to be Made in This City by the Santa Fe.

A couple of weeks ago mention was made in these columns with reference to the improvements on south First street within eighteen months, and it began to appear that something will transpire in a very short time. When Division Superintendent J. E. Hurley arrived from the south early yesterday morning he held a consultation with Mayor O. N. Harrod, and presented him with a copy of the proposed plans for a new hotel and depot in this city. The map as prepared by President Ripley and officials of the Santa Fe system show that the depot will be about 200 feet in length and will occupy a space midway between Silver and Coal avenues, and the hotel, which will contain sixty rooms with all modern improvements, will be located on First street between Gold and Silver avenues. The company officials have decided on these plans as the most suitable and profitable for the people of Albuquerque.

Their object in thus placing the new structures on the above named sites is that trains arriving in the city would in many instances be required to stop at a great length of time.

In consideration of all these improvements, Mr. Hurley asked the mayor if the people of Albuquerque would bear the expense of a viaduct across the tracks on Coal avenue? The mayor said he would consult with the citizens, and would probably be able to give him more information on that point in a few days. The superintendent will visit this city next Monday, and in the meantime, the mayor will learn the opinion of the city officials and citizens on the subject.

It is understood the old freight depot will remain on the present site for a time at least.

It will be remembered that in 1902, a viaduct across Coal avenue was considered, and an expense of material and construction amounted to about $15,000. With the present cost of steel the same structure will cost in the neighborhood of $30,000.

However, the railroad company has estimated the hotel building at a figure not to exceed $100,000, while a depot, with all the latest improvements, would amount to nearly one-half that figure.

At the Opera House Last Night.

The largest and most appreciative audience of the season greeted Madame Sechi and her company last night in the new opera house. Those who attended were perfectly satisfied, and the performance was really beyond all expectations. All numbers on the program delighted the audience, and were applauded to the echo. Madame Sechi and her company have won the admiration of the Albuquerque public, and will always receive a warm and hearty welcome.

C. F. Riggs, manager of the entertainment, comes in for a share of the praise for securing the attraction.

BICYCLE ACCIDENTS.

Worth of Experience Reduces the Number Very Largely.

Recklessness of Riders—Neglect of the Road Community Observed.

The mishaps to wheelmen and pedestrians on account of wheels generally begin in April and increase each month until cold weather sets in. During the last five years August has held the record for mishaps in cycling. The recklessness of scorers, instead of being diminished by the heat, appears to be increased, and with the temperature at 90 well-meaning riders, also, seem to be more thoughtless of their own welfare and that of others than they are in the spring and fall. In the summer of 1897 the list of bicycle accidents was so large that some riders of the timid sort were inclined to condemn cycling as a dangerous exercise. In August of that year more misfortunes of riders were reported than in any other month of the season. Apparently the only explanation of the fact was that the cyclists were more enthusiastic and less cautious than at other times.

The cycling season of 1909 has been comparatively free from accidents. The number of mishaps, judging from the accounts in the daily papers and from the observations of wheelmen, not one-half as many fatal accidents have occurred in New York this year as were reported in 1908, and the infrequency of misfortune has been a gratifying feature. There has been a decided abatement this year of wheelmen who are likely to lose their heads when in close quarters, and little has been heard of riders who used to mistake curbstones and ledges in their way for a pavement. But the exceptionally good luck of the cyclists may be attributed to some very good reasons. A veteran rider, who has himself, "been mixed up" in several bicycle accidents, accounts for the low rate of accidents by the following reasons: "Not since the bicycle first became popular have riders exhibited so much skill as now; skill not only in keeping their equilibrium, but in avoiding other cycles, and particularly in steering clear of the man who is riding a wheelless vehicle. Their ability has come not through any increased attention on the part of cycle instructors, but solely through experience. Of course hundreds of new riders have been added to the ranks, and the proportion of the wheelers to the non-wheelers has risen for at least two years and has become pretty thoroughly acquainted with their sport.

"It is true also that much of the good fortune of wheelmen has been due to the fact that they have learned to comprehend the value of the use of the horns of trucks and other vehicles. The impression which once prevailed among the 'bikers' that they alone were entitled to the right of way, and they are willing to a large extent, and they are willing to give way to the drivers of cars. On the other hand, drivers have discovered that they cannot bully and frighten the cyclists whenever they please, and that the latter have rights in which they will be protected by the police.

"Not the least plausible explanation of the season's good luck is to be found in the circumstance that fully one-half of the wheels in use to-day are equipped with strong, serviceable brakes, which their owners are able to use with telling effect. While the absence of brakes in former years was responsible for many injuries to riders, it is singular that in many instances where wheels were fitted with brakes the latter did little good, because riders were unskilled in applying them. This was largely the fault of the drivers and not of the wheels. An attempt was made to compel their use by passing a brake ordinance. Opponents of the proposed measure declared that riders who carried brakes were as liable to accidents by collision with the cars and go about head-on, and bareheaded over the ice and the steepest hills without regard to the temperature; but they have a way of heaping the blankets on their heads and wrapping up their faces to keep the cold from their eyes and nostrils. The women who herd the flocks are often out on the mountains for weeks at a time without shelter or anything to eat except parched corn, strips of dried meat and corn leaves, and this is the most powerful of nerve stimulants.

Destroying the Point.

Everyone knows the man who is notorious for his bad temper. He is a man who is notorious for his bad temper. He is a man who is notorious for his bad temper. He is a man who is notorious for his bad temper.

A Small Boy's Big Bear.

The largest bear killed in the middle Pennsylvania for many years was the genuine Black mountain variety, and tipped the scales at 350 pounds. It attracted a great deal of attention when brought to Altoona, especially as it had been shot by a boy 14 years old. The boy's father tells the tale. "We had been after the animal for several weeks, off and on, and twice we followed him to his lair, but could not dilodge him. The other morning the bear was seen in a field not far from my house, and my brother and I, with my son, gave him a hot chase. He gained on us, and we would likely have lost him had it not been for the boy. We had posted him on the public road where the bear had crossed before, and, sure enough, there he stood, and we had him. The boy saw him coming, and, although it must have been a terrifying sight, he held his ground and planted a bullet square into the bear's brain."

Big Nugget in the Kioskides.

The largest pure gold nugget found up to date in the Yukon fields has turned up on No. 24 Eldorado. It was found by Peter Gorat, a veteran miner, 50 years of age. It weighs six pounds and eight and one-half pennyweight. The gold in it is worth exactly $1,148. It is a beautiful piece of pure gold, and its lustrous surface is valued at $2,300, as a specimen. A larger piece of gold has been found, but it was mixed with silver and worth $1,800, and was unearthed last spring.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Restatement on Fourth Street.

This morning J. H. Bearup and James Wilkinson, of the firm of Bearup & Kilo,

BICYCLE ACCIDENTS.

Went out for a little drive and to exercise the horses. They had not driven a great distance until the harness broke, permitting the pole in the buggy to drop to the ground. This frightened the animals and they started on a run down Fourth street. The driver succeeded in turning the horse into a sidewalk and the pole ran under the walk. The next instant both men were up in the air and came down with a dull thud. Mr. Bearup received slight injuries which are in no way considered serious. His companion did not see so well, and a result is that he suffered intensely with an injury in the back. Mr. Wilkinson was taken to his home on north Second street and Dr. Wroth called to render the necessary medical attention.

The harness and buggy were badly demolished and the horses were soon stopped in their flight.

TEACHING YOUNG TO SWIM.

Interesting Description of How a Mother Mustard Gave Lessons to Her Offspring.

That sensible portion of the animal kingdom which invariably resorts to the term "brute creation" has a wonderful aptitude for encouraging a close acquaintance with those whom it trusts. Were it not for those inherited through generations of abused confidence and malicious cruelty, the timid "brute creation" has a wonderful aptitude for encouraging a close acquaintance with those whom it trusts. At the pool our attention was attracted by a comical picture made by an old muskrat trying to teach her babies to swim. It struck us as strange that she should go to such trouble, the little rats should have known instinctively how to navigate the way along the bank and to shallow water, above which arose their fluffy necks, bright eyes and sharp noses.

The mother set them the example by swimming across and back. She endeavored to teach them the art of waiting for their depth and let them make their own way to the shore, though you may be sure, she stayed close by them. When we were seen the old lady shrieked "Tramp!" in characteristic muskrat language, and fled to her subaqueous vestibule. I managed to call the police. The little ones did not attempt to escape. Ostrich-like, they hid their heads among the roots and left their naked tails waving above the water like a new species of porcupine waiting to be examined. The muskrat could not quite ignore the maternal instinct, as she returned and conducted her happy family to the nursery, where they received their first lesson in misanthropy.

BOLIVIA'S CURIOUS CLIMATE.

Where There Are No Shives and People Keep Warm by Piling on Clothes.

At Alto Cruceiro water freezes every night of the year and the thermometer frequently falls to six, eight and ten below zero, says the Chicago Record. There are no facilities for artificial heat except a fire place—and people keep themselves warm by piling on ponchos and other extra wraps. Mr. Grundy, who has charge of the smelter at Maravillas, says that this winter the thermometer has frequently fallen to eight degrees below zero in the sitting room of his residence, but the family have felt no discomfort from the lack of stores and furnaces, and have sat around the evening lamp reading and chatting just as they are accustomed to do at an ordinary temperature.

At noonday the sun is intensely hot, because of the elevation and the rarity of the atmosphere, and blisters the flesh of those who are not accustomed to it. There is a difference of 30 and sometimes 20 degrees in the temperature of the shade and the sunshine. Water will freeze in the shade while 20 feet away men may be working in their shirt sleeves.

The natives seem to be entirely indifferent to cold and go about head-on and bareheaded over the ice and the steepest hills without regard to the temperature; but they have a way of heaping the blankets on their heads and wrapping up their faces to keep the cold from their eyes and nostrils. The women who herd the flocks are often out on the mountains for weeks at a time without shelter or anything to eat except parched corn, strips of dried meat and corn leaves, and this is the most powerful of nerve stimulants.

SODA WATER FOR HUNGER.

It is Now Prescribed as a Palliative in Some Cases Due to Disease.

Water charged with carbonic acid gas—in other words, soda water—is now prescribed as a palliative for hunger, especially for an abnormal sense of hunger due to disease. Says Modern Medicine, which gives us this information: "Carbonic acid gas has the singular property of lessening the sense of hunger, and may profitably be prescribed in dealing with cases of diabetes in which thirst (abnormal hunger) is a prominent symptom. The seat of hunger is found in the solar plexus. By the use of water charged with carbonic acid gas, the branches of the solar plexus distributed through the viscous membrane of the stomach are influenced in such a way that the abnormal irritation of the plexus, which is the foundation for the ravenous hunger often present in diabetes and certain forms of indigestion, may be greatly mitigated, if not wholly appeased. Water charged with carbonic acid gas may likewise be employed with advantage in many cases of hyperpnea in which there is a sensation present in the stomach described by the patient as a gnawing, sensation, 'giveness,' emptiness, etc."

Too Many for the Deen.

A well-known dean of Norwich tells the following good story against himself: Some few weeks ago he came to a stile which was occupied by a farm lad who was eating his bread and bacon lunch. The boy made no attempt to allow his reverence to pass, so he was duly detoured for his lack of manners. "You seem, my lad, to be better fed than I," said the dean, "and I am sure you are." "Very like," answered the lad, "I slice off a piece of bacon, for ye teaches Ol, but Ol feeds meself."—London Answers.

Trants.

"I shall not see you till another year," said a man to his wife. "I shall see you till the day of December 31st," said the wife. "You are right," said the man. "You seem, my lad, to be better fed than I," said the dean, "and I am sure you are."

On Next Friday afternoon the Kilo Club will hold their regular weekly meeting, and "Chicago" will be the subject for discussion. The place of meeting will be announced later.
